Local camp offers those with disabilities an opportunity to overcome challenges

At Camp Little Giant, a cool breeze comes through the arts and crafts house as Gloria Studway watches Counselor Mike show her and other campers how to grow alfalfa.

The camp, run by SIUC's Touch of Nature Environmental Center, is a typical camp in many ways, but the campers who come here are special. This week's camp, which began June 17 and will continue through June 22, is for people with cerebral palsy, a condition that leaves them physically disabled, but not mentally. It is characterized by the inability to fully control motor skills. Nineteen of the 23 campers are in wheelchairs, and their ages range from 9 to 65.

"We're trying to sprout alfalfa seeds, which is a first time experience for me, and I'm looking forward to seeing how it comes out," said Studway, an Oak Park native who has come to Camp Little Giant for 17 years.

"There's something here we love. The spirit keeps wanting to revisit it."

Started in 1954, Camp Little Giant was the first program at Touch of Nature, which now has six summer programs. The camp has remained at Touch of Nature's present location on Giant City Road.

Touch of Nature was the vision of William Freeberg, an SIUC alumnus who is responsible for starting the Special Olympics, and former SIU President Delyte Morris. They envisioned a place for every individual to experience and learn in a natural setting and to enjoy recreation, no matter what their disability or developmental challenge.

"It has evolved into a fantastic opportunity for these people," said Brett

The campers' day begins with breakfast around 8 a.m. Afterward, they can choose an activity to participate in such as arts and crafts, swimming at the beach or horseback riding. Dinner begins around 5:30 p.m., then they may have a campfire or watch a movie.

Randy Osborn, program coordinator and camp director, says the fun and enjoyment happens on its own, with the campers able to swim, play games, talk and go to a dance.

Gant hits delays yet again

Lack of facts and counsel push all involved back

BRETT NAUMAN

The SIUC student whose arrest sparked criticism of the Carbondale Police Department was due in court Wednesday. However, he is experiencing problems similar to those of the commission in charge of investigating police actions that night — delays.

Patrick Gant, 26, appeared in Jackson County circuit court Wednesday only to inform the court that his new counsel was not prepared to represent him.

Gant was arrested after he attempted to grab an ID card from Carbondale police officer Mark Wilson at a block party in the 200 block of East College Street. He struck Wilson on the arm and was charged with aggravated battery and obstructing a peace officer. Gant was also charged with a second count of aggravated battery and resisting a peace officer for biting the finger of officer Jeff Gill.

The controversy surrounding the block party stems from the onlookers who described Gant's arrest as violent and protested the use of Mace by police on the crowds that formed to watch it.

Gant's court date had originally been scheduled for July 5, but had recently been reset for Wednesday. Gant told Judge David Watt that he only found out about the switch on Friday. Watt became visibly agitated with Gant after receiving this information.

"This is the third time we have had to postpone this hearing," Watt said.

The judge told Gant he needed to withdraw the name of his former attorney and present the name of his new counsel, a St. Louis lawyer.

Watt is not the only one experiencing frustrating delays. The Board of Fire and Police Commissioners have conducted two informal hearings into the incident to decide whether Carbondale Police used proper conduct, both in Gant's arrest and how the crowds were dispersed.

The board has run into

Gov. Ryan to sign coal legislation Friday

MOLLY PARKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A $3.5 billion plan to put "old king coal" back on its throne in Southern Illinois is expected to be signed by Gov. George Ryan Friday, state officials said.

Ryan will sign the extensive bill at 11:30 a.m. Friday at the Arch Minerals Captain Mine, located south of Pinckneyville.

"The coal bill the governor is going to sign is probably the biggest thing to hit Southern Illinois since the Clean Air Act devastated it in 1990," said Heisner, a former employee of the coal industry.

The region's economy, which paralleled the success of the coal industry, followed its failure as the 1990 Clean Air Act forced mines to shut down in succession across the region.

The Clean Air Act set strict standards on coal production directly related to the high-sulfur content of Illinois coal, which is known to be a cause of acid rain.

Cities that once thrived in Southern Illinois, coal towns such as Mt. Vernon, Johnston City, West Frankfort, Pinckneyville and DuQuoin, cited coal as their economic boon.

DuQuoin, which featured several strip mines on the outskirts of town, possessed some of the most sought-after jobs. DuQuoin City Clerk Rex Duncan said that a mine employee with a high school education or even less could make $40,000-$50,000.

"The coal industry was really the life blood of the town," Duncan said. "From the turn of the 19th and 20th century, really up until the late 1970s, coal was king, and it drove our economy."

But those who remember the coal days are now mostly retired.

Bob Winthrop, who was thankful for his laborious job, began working in the coal mines in Perry County in October 1950. Before retiring in 1987, Winthrop ran a diesel drag, skimming shovel, yard shovel and drag-line shovel. He retired just before a time when herds of workers were being laid off.

West Frankfort, which had five mines on the outskirts of town and the world's largest coal mine, Orient Mine #2, employed around 2,000 people at its peak. Today the town only houses around 8,500 people.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard, whose hometown is West Frankfort, remembers the perks of growing up in a coal town.

"I know how important coal has been, and I hope that in the next several years the coal industry can be brought back," he said.

Every year the citizens of West Frankfort enjoyed the "Old King Coal" festival. Collectively, the town nominated a veteran member of one of the many mines to be the grand marshal in a large parade.

However, the "Old King Coal" festival stopped running about three years ago, as the economy tanked and the coal industry in Southern Illinois became something of the past.

Ann Compa was the daughter of a coal miner and 45-year resident of West Frankfort.

Compa remembers the crowds of people that gathered on the streets to celebrate a business that kept their town afloat. "I wished they wouldn't have stopped it," she said.

With Ryan signing the coal legislation bill on Friday, optimism reigns that the coal industry may again rejuvenate this area.

The effort to bring the industry back has been a bipartisan effort between legislators throughout Illinois. Southern Illinois needs the jobs and economic boost, and northern Illinois needs the power. The timing is optimum, considering the present possibility of a national energy crisis.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, who was a major advocate in forming the legislation, said that this could be the turning point for the job market in Southern Illinois.

Ryan, U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill., Bost, U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, coal experts and environmentalists met at the SIUC campus for a roundtable discussion on the future of coal May 18. The discussion was moderated by John Mead, director of the SIUC Coal Research Center.

SIUC President James Walker said SIUC will remain very visible in the implementation of new coal mines and power plants through research and development of clean coal.

"Without a doubt it will be good for SIUC, working with the coal industry through the coal research center, economic development of the region and jobs related to the coal initiative," Walker said.

Environmentalists are still concerned about bringing coal to the forefront of Southern Illinois industry, but their voices seem to be drowned out by those of coal enthusiasts. However, Ryan has taken their concerns in stride, including further development of clean-coal technology and strict environmental standards in his plan.

Major provisions of the plan include:

- * providing new coal mines with tax incentives including sales tax exemptions on building materials and equipment;

- * $500 million financial assistance program for coal-fired generating plants;

- * Up to 1.7 billion in revenue bond authorization for electric plants generating Illinois coal mining jobs, including mine-mouth plants and plants that use clean-coal technology;

- * $500 million for existing coal-fired plants to add scrubbers to reduce air emissions; and

- * a review by Illinois Environmental Protection Agency of local coal-fired power plants not subject to the new air quality restrictions.

that many of the complaints were submitted by SIUC students who have left Carbondale for the summer. At this point, the only testimony heard by the commission has been by police officers that were on the scene that night.

After listening to the testimony of Carbondale Police Sgt. Dan Edwards, the board members decided to put greater effort toward contacting some of the complainants. Welch said it was imperative that the board "hear from the other side."

"We want to give anyone that will the opportunity to come talk to us so we can make our decision using the best facts available," Welch said.

• A case of alleged credit card fraud was reported to have occurred between 11:30 a.m. Saturday and 3:54 p.m. Monday. A 20-year-old Lentz Hall resident told SIUC police that a credit card she had applied for but never received had been used by an unknown suspect. The amount charged is unknown, and police continue to investigate.

• Bernard V. Jones, 37, of Carbondale, was arrested at 12:53 a.m. Tuesday on a warrant charging failure to appear on an original charge of contempt of court. Jones was unable to post the required bond and was transported to the Jackson County Jail.

• Christopher C. Gideon, 30, of Carbondale, was arrested at 1:41 a.m. Tuesday on East Grand Avenue at Lewis Park and charged with possession of drug paraphernalia. Gideon was released after posting a $100 bond.

• Daniel J. Leek, 25, of Carbondale, was arrested at 2:56 a.m. Wednesday at Mill and Poplar streets and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, illegal transportation of alcohol, driving on a suspended driver's license, and disobeying a stop sign. Leek was transported to the Jackson County Jail when he was unable to post the required bond.

LISA SONNENSCHEIN - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jared Fogle aka "the Subway guy" makes an appearance at the Illinois Centre Mall in Marion. Fogle signed autographs on Subway napkins and discussed his weight loss success.

Slim sandwich sage

Jared Fogle spreads the word on healthy dining

ROBIN GARDNER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jared Fogle, ordinary college student turned Subway-guru, advised local college students to stay away from beer and greasy fast-food restaurants in order to keep their weight down.

Jared, who lost 245 pounds by eating two Subway sandwiches a day for an entire year, visited the Illinois Centre Mall in Marion Wednesday as part of a cross-country tour publicizing the benefits of eating healthy.

"I would never tell anyone what to do," Jared said. "I'm simply telling people what worked for me. I understand how tough it is to lose weight."

Before the diet, Jared had topped out at 425 pounds in March 1998 while a student at Indiana University. He had not set foot on a scale in four years and realized when he saw his weight he had to do something.

"I decided to get off my couch and walk next door to the Subway," Jared said.

For the next year, Jared would buy a six-inch turkey sandwich for lunch and a foot-long veggie sandwich for dinner, both with no cheese, oil or mayonnaise. All sandwiches contained less than 7 grams of fat. Eleven months later Jared had lost 245 pounds, and the Indiana University student newspaper, the Indiana Daily, wrote a story about him. It's commercial history from then on.

The now thin Jared, 23, has maintained his 190 pound weight for two years and is an inspiration to several local people.

"He seems like a sincere fellow," said Mary Harlen, of Marion. "I need to lose 10 more pounds, and I'm going to try the Subway sandwiches."

Harlen and her two friends received words of encouragement, along with autographs and a picture with Fogle today at the Illinois Centre Mall. Jessica Forguer, a Marion native, is planning to use the Subway sandwiches as part of her new diet. Although Jared's favorite is a turkey sandwich, the three ladies prefer the chicken and club sandwiches.

According to Jared, students need to watch what they eat, and limit the amount of soda, beer and fast food they consume. He said that video and Internet games make it too easy to "balloon up."

"During college, my idea of exercise was moving from my couch to the Subway shop next door," Jared said.

He advises students to remain active in order to stay healthy and not end up with his kind of weight problem. He had tried food portions, shakes and frozen-dinner meals, but nothing worked.

"Subway sandwiches allowed me to lose weight for the first time in my life," Jared said. "I hated to cook, and Subway was something I thought I could stick with."

Jared is engaged to be married in October 2001, and will embark on a world-wide, healthy-eating tour next year as well.

Bost presents overview of state coal legislation at city council meeting

Meeting begins with remembrance of 'community servant'

MARK LAMBRID
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Tuesday night's city council meeting began on a somber note, remembering the contributions of a dedicated community member.

Members of the Carbondale City Council, city staff and citizens paused in silence Tuesday night to remember Joyce Guyon, wife of former SIU President John Guyon. Mayor Neil Dillard requested the moment of silence before the council meeting to remember his close friend and "tireless community servant."

After the time of reflection, the council heard a report from a local legislator, was informed of a housing plan submitted by Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan and held a Liquor Control Commission meeting.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, made a presentation about the legislation passed during the last session in Springfield. The highlight of Bost's boasting was the $3.5 billion coal plan that is expected to be signed into law Friday by Gov. George Ryan.

Bost blamed the collapse of the coal industry in Illinois on the Clean Air Act, which set strict environmental standards. The Clean Air Act was first signed into law in 1972 and was revised over the following decades to include laws that made the burning of Illinois coal prohibitively expensive.

Illinois coal has high levels of sulfur that turns into sulfur dioxide when burned. Sulfur dioxide is one of the pollutants that cause acid rain.

Bost also touted the plan's financing that would not cost Illinois taxpayers.

"The burden is taken off of the taxpayer and put on the coal industry," Bost said.

Education was also high on Bost's list of accomplishments in the last legislative session.

"The big winner was education," Bost said. The governor kept his promise to put 51 percent of all new revenue into education."

Flanagan informed the council that she had submitted a housing plan to City Manager Jeff Doherty. Flanagan's plan calls for the city to form a task force to improve housing throughout the city.

The plan outlines actions that a task force should examine, but stops short of making recommendations for immediate action. The task force would include up to 12 individuals.

Flanagan asked that her plan be discussed and that action be taken at the next meeting.

Immediately following the council meeting, the Carbondale Liquor Control Commission met to review liquor licenses. The commission is made up of the council members and the mayor.

The commission approved the renewal of 51 of the 52 liquor licenses in the city. The one license that was not renewed was for the Ima's Pizza location at 400 S. Walnut Street. The Ima's location has closed and is for sale.

City Clerk Janet Vaught informed the commission that the deal to sell Carboz had fallen through. In March, prospective buyers of Carboz came before the commission to request a transfer of the liquor license after the Liquor Advisory Board recommended that the commission deny the request.

Arts in the garden begins with guitarist

MARLEEN TROUT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

As the first act in this summer's Arts in the Garden series, Del Herbert loves the way his guitar's acoustic sound bounces off the curvy, earth-colored sculpture.

Today and for the following three Thursdays, from noon until 1 p.m., lunch-munchers can be serenaded on the cool lawn of the University Museum's Sculpture Garden, located behind the museum in Faner Hall.

"The nature sounds go along with the music," said Herbert, a master's student in social work. "Back there in the garden you can't hear cars, even though you're in the center of everything."

In case of inclement weather, performances will take place in the museum's auditorium.

The event, sponsored by the Friends of the Museum, The Museum Gift Shop and SIUC, originally began as Music in the Garden in 1996. It expanded last year to Arts in the Garden, because the lineup often includes poetry or dance.

Lori Huffman, acting director of the museum, said one goal of the program is to let the public know the museum extends beyond paintings on the wall.

"People like the variety of music presented and that it's outdoors in kind of an interesting atmosphere," Huffman said. "It's free, on campus and pretty accessible to faculty and students. What a way to spend your lunch hour."

Del Herbert has played in area bands spanning three decades, such as Farm in the '70s, The Convertibles in the '80s and Dead Ringer in the '90s.

Herbert calls his style "prayer-guitar" instead of air guitar because his brand of rock and country is relaxing and meditative. Now, instead of clubs, he plays at church and for benefits such as Relay For Life.

Herbert's chord strumming led to his major at SIUC. After being laid off from the coal mines in West Frankfort, he decided to volunteer at the Big Muddy Prison in Ina as a guitar player for "Leisure Time Services." At the prison, Herbert received a crash course in various forms of music from rap to country to blues to jazz, playing whatever particular inmates wanted to hear.

"My wife said, 'That's just like social work. You oughta take up some classes.' So I did," Herbert said. "Music is like social work. It connects people, keeps you in touch and opens your heart up to other people."

water?" a counselor asks when dinner time arrives.

"Are we going to be able to come back down?" Matt asks wit' excitement in his voice.

Johnney Niedemyers, the youngest camper at 9 years old, is enjoying his first year at camp. The blonde-haired boy bounces his yellow ball in his wheelchair and says to counselor Justin Franklin, "I'm going to trick you," as he bounces the ball away from Franklin.

Franklin pretends to throw the ball back at Johnney as he covers his face and laughs with excitement.

The needs of these campers are many, since some of them are profoundly disabled. They need help going to the bathroom, getting around and eating.

This is probably the most challenging group we have," said Ellen Taylor, a counselor and senior in therapeutic recreation at SIUC. "A lot of the campers rely on you for all their personal care. You're feeding them breakfast, lunch and dinner."

The staff is a huge part of the program. This week the ratio of staff to camper is 1-to-1 because of the group's high need level. The staff receives two weeks of training prior to the start of camp. Training focuses on addressing the needs of people with different disabilities and handling the stress of the job. They are trained in first aid and CPR, and also receive an extensive orientation about the health and medical needs of the campers.

"The other aspect of training is about building a team of people that can be together 24 hours a day," Osborn said. "Not only are they under a lot of stress by doing this kind of work, but the hours are real long."

In the evening, the campers sit around the campfire singing, talking and eating cookies. Counselors sing songs and involve everyone.

Johnney sits around the campfire in a wheelchair as he laughs and enjoys what is going on around him.

"Who's got a song?" a counselor asks.

Johnney starts to sing a song from "The Little Mermaid." One of the counselors runs over to him and squats down at his side, singing along.

"Up where they walk, up where they run..." he sings, making motions with his hands. "Wish I could be part of that world."

The audience claps loudly, letting him know how much they enjoyed his song.

"I like the feeling that we're doing something that is rare," Osborn said. "When it works, it makes it all worthwhile."

The music ends and the counselors help the campers get ready for bed.

On Friday, camp will end and the campers will go home, taking with them the memories and the friendships they have made, and more than half will look forward to returning next year. The counselors will also take memories and friendships with them, anticipating another week and a new group.

"At the end of the week when I see the relationships the campers build and the relationships between the campers and counselors, I forget how hard it is," Osborn said.

It can be hard for both the campers and the counselors when Friday arrives. The entire week they interact, talk, share stories, and participate in a number of activities and, most importantly, the lasting friendships.

"All I know is that every time the campers leave I cry so hard," Taylor said. "It's not a sad cry, it's just happy because I know that they had a great time and I had a great time."

R-T receives major donation from media giant

WILLIAM ALONSO
DAILY EGYPTIAN

When the new recording studio in the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts is completed, it will rival those in Hollywood and Nashville, according to an SIUC digital media specialist.

The new recording studio in SIUC's radio-television program is being finished with help from a $100,000 donation by Westwood One and matching funds provided by the University. The studio will help keep students up-to-date in an evolving medium.

The contribution comes from Norman J. Pattiz, chairman of Westwood One, Inc. Westwood One is a media giant that produces and distributes radio programming and carries personalities such as Don Imus, Casey Kasem and Larry King. The task of collecting equipment for the studio is being coordinated by Mike Lescelius, digital media specialist for SIUC. Lescelius said the studio is at about 40 percent completion.

"All the purchase requisitions are going in this week," Lescelius said. "Hopefully by August we will be 75 percent there, and by the end of the year, we should be in full operating mode."

The donation was secured through the efforts of Joe Foote, former dean of the College of MCMA; Mike Starr, former chair of the radio-television department; and Scott Hodgson, acting chair of the radio-television department.

"The relationship with Westwood One began with Joe Foote and Mike Starr. Through their relationships,

We will now be on the cutting edge of digital audio technology. We are where the industry is at.

Scott Hodgson
acting chair, Radio-Television Department

Norm Pattiz was brought here. Seeing our program, he decided to make a donation," Hodgson said.

The studio is a vital tool for students in the radio-television department. It provides students with real-world experience on par with the Daily Egyptian and WSIU television.

"Our college has made a reputation on providing real-world experience," Hodgson said. "We will now be on the cutting edge of digital audio technology. We are where the industry is at."

Mother of assault victim appears in court

Prosecutors have recordings between woman and Fisher

BRETT NAUMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The woman accused of tipping off Carbondale landlord Henry Fisher about a police investigation and then lying to police about it appeared in a Williamson County courtroom Wednesday.

She is the mother of a Herrin child younger than 13 who alleges that Fisher sexually assaulted her. The victim's mother is charged with obstruction of justice and destroying evidence.

The Williamson County State's Attorney's office asserts the woman lied to Herrin police officer Mark Brown on Feb. 2 and Feb. 5 about whether she had informed Fisher of an investigation trying to determine whether he had molested her daughter.

The motion hearing began when the woman's lawyer filed a motion to dismiss the charges. Assistant State's Attorney Lisa Beatey told Judge Paul S. Murphy that she will be prepared to argue against the motion on June 29.

The main piece of evidence the prosecution will utilize is a 12-page typed transcript and mini-disc with a detailed conversation between the child's mother and Fisher.

Fisher, owner of Home Rentals, is charged with criminal predatory sexual assault of the girl and is expected to appear in court on Aug. 9 for rulings on several pending motions in his case.

After leaving the courthouse Wednesday, the woman agreed that the charges against her were unusual, but that she should not comment on them further without consulting her lawyer.

Brown also would not comment, stating that the case is pending, and he would let the Williamson County State's Attorney's office release any new information about the case.

Kill relies on basics to revitalize program

Football coach applies fundamental principles in an effort to earn victory

CLINT HARTING
DAILY EGYPTIAN

New Saluki football head coach Jerry Kill is well aware of the football program he has agreed to run.

Without a winning season since 1991, Kill knows he has his work cut out for him.

Kill's positive approach focuses on the root of basic problems, and the results can be witnessed in the upbeat vibe of the players during this summer's daily workout sessions.

This summer's turnout of 55 players, as opposed to 15 players last year, is participating in conditioning and work-out exercises, using valuable summer time for preparation.

Kill, who lives religiously by a manual that includes his basic life principles, says it has nothing to do with wins or strategy, but the foundations of running a sound football program.

Some of Kill's basic life principles are simple things: being on time, learning and understanding the meaning of team and being the best conditioned and strongest team possible.

"These are what I call little goals," Kill said. "Before you get to the bigger goals you have to do these things. We have no chance to win unless we take care of those."

Kill began working with the team during Spring Ball practices. He noticed a slogan on the shorts of some players that read "Deserve Victory." Kill immediately applied his basic-principle approach.

"I told the players anything you get in life is what you put into it," Kill said. "You just don't get victory, you earn it."

Kill is not only preparing for the upcoming season, but for the long-term future as well.

"Right now we have poured the basement, and we are working on the frame of the house," Kill said.

The players have responded to their new coach and his southern-rooted philosophy, which is apparent from the impressive turnout for off-season workouts.

The coaching staff, which includes assistant coach Eric Klein, has also responded, volunteering his free time to work individually with players, preparing them physically and mentally.

STEVE JAHNKE - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Summer is not time to rest for the SIUC football players. The Salukis stay hard at work in the weight room on Tuesday at the Arena. They open their season on Sept. 8 at Southeast Missouri State University.

Since Kill was hired Dec. 7, the team's cumulative grade point average has jumped from a 2.19 GPA in the fall of 2000 to a 2.6 by the end of spring semester.

"Coach Kill is a very disciplined coach," said Kristina Theriault, academic coordinator for the Athletic Department. "He has expectations, and the players have responded to them."

The main thing players are saying about Kill is that he brings positive energy to the team.

That's a big difference from the previous coaching staff, led by Jan Quarless, who was fired on Nov. 17 after a 14-30 four-year stint.

"Q had a tendency to find negative things," said senior wide receiver Mark Shasteen, referring how the program was operated last year. "Kill tries to keep everybody's spirits up."

Junior wide receiver Calvin Sims takes note of the positive environment created by Kill.

"It is very energetic, but at the same time it is laid back," Sims said. "It's kinda perfect."

Junior running back Tom Koutsos referred to the upgrades Kill has made to help improve the attitude of the team, which include a new stadium at the University, new helmets and a big-screen television for the players' lounge.

"It's a rebirth for us," Koutsos said. "We have better confidence with the new additions."

Kill believes winning football games will take care of itself, provided the concentration of his team sticks with the basics.

"The bottom line is to take a young group of men and build a foundation for the future," Kill said. "As long as we are improving each week no matter what happens, I can live with it."

Women's swimming restocks roster after losing eight seniors

Goelz 'excited' about new additions to defending conference champs

JENS DEJU
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Last season had a storybook ending for the eight seniors on the SIU women's swimming team as they became the first class in Missouri Valley Conference history to win the title every year they were in school.

Those eight leaders are now gone, but a new group is poised to keep building on the foundation the previous class left for it.

The defending conference champions will feature 10 new swimmers, which has MVC Women's Coach of the Year Jeff Goelz anxious for the fall.

"We've got a great group coming in; I'm really excited about them," Goelz said. "We lost some girls, and it hurts to lose them. I'm not going to lie to you, but this group coming in is an exciting group, and the girls we have here are an exciting group. If you put them all together, some real great things could come out of this next year."

In addition to the 10 new athletes, the Salukis return 17 from last year's championship squad led by three-time champ in both the 100 and 200 yard backstroke Brooke Radostits. SIU also returns sophomore Leanne Pienaar, who took three individual titles at her first MVC Championship.

Goelz is banking on some of the incoming freshmen to produce the way Pienaar did her first season, particularly Ashley McCurdy from Plano, Texas; Andry Hatzandoni from Larnaca, Cyprus; and Rachel Green from England.

"Andry Hatzandoni is an IM-er (Individual Medley), backstroke and 50 freestyler, and she will make an immediate impact," Goelz said. "Rachel Green swims the 100 butterfly and does the sprint freestyle, and she's going to have some great times. Ashley McCurdy is one I am especially excited about."

While these three women might get a lot of the attention early, they are by no means the only quality swimmers in the group.

"I'm really looking for them to step up and make an immediate impact," Goelz said. "That's a good group of girls coming in, a very solid group, so we should see some great performances from them even as freshmen."

Amongst the herd of newcomers, the Salukis have two with college experience in the form of junior Kendall Forster from Indian River Community College in Fort Pierce, Fla., and sophomore Brigitta Olson from the University of New Mexico.

While some teams might worry about chemistry problems with bringing in such a big group, the Salukis are confident the newcomers will fit right in.

Senior Courtney Corder said the incoming group meshed well with the returning girls when they were in town for their recruiting trips, and she doesn't foresee things changing in the fall.

"Next year is going to be amazing," Corder said. "All these new girls are extremely fast and our level of practice will be stepped up as well as our level of performance in the pool. I think at conference, we'll crush everybody just like we did this year."
